

Albufera Nature Park & El Palmar

Located very near to the city centre, this park is among the natural spaces with the most environmental and ecological value in Europe.

The Albufera Nature Park, dominated by the largest lake in Spain, is a natural paradise for many bird species.

Don't miss the spectacular sight of the sun setting over the waters as seen from a typical fishing boat, or a stroll through the extensive pine forest and dune formations that separate the lake from the Mediterranean Sea.

El Palmar

At the heart of the Park we find the village of El Palmar, the home of Paella, which was actually an island until the 14th century.

It has served as the inspiration for various masterpieces of universal literature.

A stroll through the streets of this historical village will bring you to the edge of the vast rice fields, a perfect place to stop and enjoy a traditional Valencian dish the Paella.
